NUMB. 43.

THE South-Carolina Gazette.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From Saturday, NOVEMBER 16, to Saturday, NOVEMBER 23. 1734.

Naples, Auguſt 10.

THE Galleys of France which went to the Adriatick Sea to aſſiſt in reducing the Town of Brinddiſi and Caſtle of Cottrone, finding themſelves unable to prevail upon the reſpective Governors to ſurrender, return'd on Saturday laſt into theſe Seas, and caſt Anchor, Part before this City, and the reſt at Pozzuolo. The ill Succeſs of this Expedition is imputed to the ſmall Number of Troops that were ſent thither, and even the greateſt Part of theſe had the Misfortunes to fall ſick. On the 8th Inſtant Don Carlos enter'd Gaeta in Triumph, and repair'd immediately to the Great Church, to aſſiſt at the Te Deum which was ſinging there. The Imperial Garriſon was the ſame day conducted out of the Town with the uſual Military Honours; but being arriv'd at the Trenches, the Soldiers were oblig'd to ſurrender up the Arms, and themſelves Priſoners of War. According to the Capitulation, the Officers retain'd their Swords, and had their Baggage deliver'd ſafe to them. The Count de Traun, the Imperial Governor, was kill'd in the Siege. Our Letters add, that as ſoon as the Garriſon began to beat the Chamade, Don Carlos took a rich Cockade from his Hat, and put it upon that of the young Chevalier de St. George. The Capitulation of Peſcara was in the ſame Terms as that of Gaeta; they marched out with Honour, but became Priſoners immediately after. A few days ago, a Crew of 40 Rowers, belonging to the Imperial Galleys, commanded by the Marquis Pallacini at Trieſte, came hither, with Complaints that they were almoſt ſtarv'd, having receiv'd no Pay for a long Time paſt.

LONDON, Auguſt 29.

'Tis advis'd from the Rhine, that Prince Eugene has his head Quarters at Heidelburg, a City belonging to the Elector Palatine, that the Detachment of French Troops was return'd from exacting Contributions in the Dutchy of Wirtemberg, and the ſeveral others Bodies having join'd at Radſtadt the 28th Inſtant, N. S. the whole Army was ſince in full March for Briſgau, there, as 'tis ſaid, to beſiege Briſac and to inveſt Friburg. The two Armies were on the 30th Inſtant, N. S. more than Thirty German Leagues aſunder. The French threaten to bombard Frankfort, for having refus'd to pay Contributions. As for Briſac, the Fortifications are in good Condition, and the Garriſon conſiſts of 3000 Men, with Plenty of Proviſion and Ammunition. The Stench in the Moraſs of Philipſburg, by the great Number of dead Bodies which could not be remov'd or bury'd ſince the late Siege, is ſo very great, that it has occaſion'd a Sickneſs in the Garriſon there.

Letters from the Rhine take Notice, that the Elector Palatine being Neutral in the preſent War, the Imperial and French Officers repair to his Highneſs's Palace at Manheim, and dine together frequently, behaving to each other with that Politeneſs, peculiar to the French and German Nations: One Day ſeveral Sallies of Wit paſs'd between the German and French Officers there, when one of the latter ſaid, he wonder'd (for they all expected it) why Prince Eugene did not attack them as he did the Turks at Belgrade; to which one of the German Officers reply'd, That the Prince had then Turks, and not Frenchmen to deal with.

Some Advices from Poland by the Way of Hamburg import, that King Staniſlaus having arriv'd ſafe at his Army, was now at the Head of 50,000 Poles, amongſt whom were 15 Regiments regular Troops and 20,000 Horſe, moſt of them Towazyſtwo or Gentlemen.——But this may want Confirmation.

From the French Camp at Kupenheim, Auguſt 27. The Marſhal de Noailles, who had encamped with the Body of Troops under his Command at Selſingen ſince the 19th inſtant, broke up from thence the 22d, and advanced to Iffretzheim, where he encamped, and from whence he came the ſame day to reconnoitre this Camp. The Army commanded by the Marſhal d'Aſfeldt, having marched in different Bodies to Fort Louis, they there paſſed the Rhine, and by the 23d, moſt of the Army were in different Camps, within Reach of that of the Marſhal de Noailles. The 24th the Army marched, and arrived here, where the Marſhal d'Aſfeldt fixed his Quarters between Kupenheim and the Brook of Raſtadt. He divided the Army into ſeveral Bodies, and that which is here conſiſts of 52 Battalions and 19 Squadrons. The Prince de Tingry encamped over-againſt the Gorge of Baden, with ſix Batalions, the 13 Squadrons of the King's Houſhold, the eight of Gendarmerie and two Regiments of Dragoons. The Sieur de Quadt, with 8 Battalions and 16 Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons, encamped in the Village of Lyberſheim. The Count de Belleiſle formed a Camp with 8 Battalions and 16 Squadrons of Horſe and Dragoons; and the Marquis de Flavacourt formed another with 4 Battalions and 20 Squadrons. The Marquis de Leuville continues on the other ſide of the Rhine, where he has 24 Battalions and 11 Squadrons under his Command. The 25th, the Marſhal d'Aſfeldt ordered a Forrage to be made towards Raſtadt, which was very plentiful: To-morrow we are to make a general Forrage in the Gorge of Raſtadt Brook; and this Morning a Detachment of 2000 Foot and 400 Horſe marched from hence, under the Command of the Count d'Abigné, to ſecure the Poſt of Gertsback, and form a Chain upon the Heights which range along that Gorge. Prince Eugene, who arrived upon the Neckar the 19th inſtant, has kept only a Part of his Army with him there; having ſent a conſiderable Detachment of his Foot to Hailbron, and towards Phortzheim, in order to cover the Duchy of Wirtemberg and he has likewiſe ſent ſome other Detachments into the Gorges of Stutgard. Prince Eugene was expected the 23 at Schwetzſinguen; but juſt now we hear that he was yeſterday with his Army in his Camp near the Neckar.

Hague, Auguſt 30. Though few of the Electors of the Empire have ſent their Contingents to Prince Eugene's Army, yet that Great General finds Means to baffle the Enterprizes of his Enemies: They were the other Day within two Cannon-ſhot of Mentz: They even threatned that City with a Bombardment, if the Inhabitants did not immediately raiſe the Contributions they demanded; but unhappily for them, Prince Eugene appeared; he made as if he would paſs the Rhine: the Intrepid French ſet Fire to their Camp, abandoned Part of their Proviſions at Neder-Ulm, returned with great Precipitation towards Worms, Frankendal and Spires, and repaſſing the Rhine at Philipsburg, went and pitched their Tents at Bruchſal, a Camp twice before in the Poſſeſſion of the Imperialiſts, and twice poſſeſſed by the French; ſo that you may imagine the Country about it is pretty cloſe ſheered. Prince Eugene lay ſtill all this while behind the Neckar, where are Bridges, in order to follow the Enemy as ſoon as he can get any certain Intelligence of their Deſigns. The Members of the Empire muſt therefore thank themſelves, if the French ruin the Countries bordering upon the Rhine, and make ſuch Conqueſt as the important Fortreſs of Philipsburg; for had they ſent to the Imperial Army only one Moiety of what they conſented to in the Dyet of the Empire, Prince Eugene would not only have been able to prevent the French paſſing the Rhine, but even to ravage Alſace, drive them out of Lorrain, and penetrate into Champagne.

The Elector of Saxony, in a great meaſure the Occaſion of the War, employs his Troops in ruining the Granary of Europe, and in deſpoiling the Uſeful Commerce of Dantzick, from which Town he exacts exorbitant Contributions, but orders not ſo much as a ſingle Squadron to the Rhine, though he talks of ſending his Contingent thither every Day.

The Elector of Bavaria picks Quarrels with the States of his Circle; he has Troops enow to ſet the Enemies of the Empire agog to go and join them; but not a Regiment that he can ſend to join Prince Eugene's Army.

The Elector of Cologn has a Camp at Godesberg, where he takes a Pleaſure in going to ſee his Troops aſſembled, and augments their Numbers every day; but not a Company does he march to the Neckar.

The Elector of Brandenburg has a hearty Good-Will; his Troops are ready to march; but why ſhould He be the only Elector that furniſhes his Contingent, unleſs the others would follow his Example?

The Electors of Mentz and Triers are ruined by the Marches and Counter-Marches of Friend and Foe in their Territories; and the Elector Palatine, contrary to all the Conſtitutions of the Empire, abandons the Safety of his Country, and concludes with the Enemy a Neutrality fatal to his Neighbours.

Had it not been better for the Emperor, that the Empire had not declared War againſt France, than to drag it on in this Liſtleſs manner? His Imperial Majeſty, in that caſe, not relying upon the numerous Succours of the Concluſum of the Dyet, might have taken Troops into his Pay of divers Princes, as he did the King of Pruſſia, the Landgrave of Heſſe-Caſſel, the King of Denmark, &c. But as it is now ordered, the Empire has declared War againſt France, and left the Emperor alone to carry it on. What is become of the Conſtitutions of the Empire, and thoſe Laws which formerly ſo cloſely united the Members with their Head? Does the Germanick Republick no longer ſubſiſt?

We are aſſured, that Prince Eugene is at preſent encamped with his Army in the Neighbourhood of Manheim, and having his Quarters at Swetzingen, a Pleaſure-Houſe of the Elector-Palatine's, he wrote from thence to his Electoral Highneſs in very ſtrong Terms, telling him, That it was 'high time for him to chuſe his Side, and let him know, 'whether he was for France or for the Empire; for that 'a Neutrality could not be allowed him in the preſent Con-'juncture, and eſpecially without the Emperor's Con-'currence.' The Elector's Anſwer is impatiently expected, his Electoral Highneſs being greatly embaraſſed. That Prince never had ſo brilliant a Court in his whole Life as at preſent, having every day at his Table all the Princes and Generals of Note in both Armies.

Hague, Sept. 3. Of all the Wars that ever were made, none was carried on ſo agreeably, as that in Italy has been ſince the Battle of Parma: It looks as if both Parties had a mind to repair the Brutality of that Action by dint of Politeneſs: The Officers of both Armies familiarly viſit each other from Quiſtello to Quingentolo, and vice verſa. The King of Sardinia, Royal General, a thing pretty rare at this time a Day, gives Balls, Opera's, Comedies, and what not? every Day in his Quarters at San Benedetto; and ſometimes the German Generals aſſiſt thereat; but that which crowns all this Politeneſs, is, that Barques are ſuffered to paſs freely up and down the Po, with Proviſions, Arms, Ammunition, Sick, &c. for both Armies, without the leaſt Diſturbance or Moleſtation on one ſide or the other. This, I muſt confeſs, is much more genteel, than upon the Rhine, where the Imperial Huſſars could not bear the French Generals to have Setts of Plate in the Field, but carried them almoſt all off.

The Armies upon the Rhine march and counter-march, without undertaking any thing. Mr. Walpole's and their High-Mightineſſes Couriers are ſet out for the Reſpective Courts with Propoſals, and Men will think it long e're they return; but unleſs Staniſlaus be King of Poland, is there any thing to be done? Will victorious France abandon him? No. The Victorious Ruſſians, will they ſuffer him upon the Throne? No. Ergo The Major being denied, what becomes of the Minor?

From the Glouceſter Journal, Sept. 24.

Hague, Sept. 17. N. S. All the Converſation here turns upon Projects of peace, which every one (that pleaſes) forms in the Mould of his own Imagination; for we ſee here a great Number of them, but ſo ridiculous, that I ſhall ſend you none. It is generally believed that what ſet our Schemiſt's Head at Work, was a Word that Mr. W---- dropt in Jeſt, to wit, That there was 100,000 Crowns for him that produced an acceptable Plan.

I cannot ſay the Marquis de Fenelon has made any formal Declaration, or given it in Writing under his Hand; but I have Reaſon to believe, his Excellency was lately heard to ſay by way of Diſcourſe, That the moſt Chriſtian King deſired nothing ſo ardently as a good Peace; but that the Powers Mediators ought to make it abſolutely the firſt Article of the Treaty, that King Staniſlaus ſhould be acknowledged King of Poland; and that upon this Condition his Majeſty would reſtore his Conqueſts. This Reſolution of the Moſt Chriſtian King is ſo natural, and has been ſo often inſinuated, that we are told the Emperor, to facilitate an Accommodation on that Side, has actually order'd his Miniſters, eſpecially thoſe in the North, to carry themſelves very impartially with regard to the Diſputes in Poland. But will the Czarina, who has had the Intereſt of King Auguſtus ſo much at Heart, ſo eaſily abandon him and them? Men lay Wagers on the Affirmative Side of the Queſtion, and then the Courts of France and ---- will perſuade the Czarina not only to abandon King Auguſtus, who does not betray any great Ambition for the Bootleſs Thorns of that Crown, but alſo to embrace King Staniſlaus's Party, upon certain Conditions advantageous to Ruſſia.

The Duke de Bitonto is at laſt ſailed for the Kingdom of Sicily, with 360 Tranſports; and if the Spaniards make the Conqueſt of that Iſland, as they have done of Naples, the Emperor will loſe this Year above 20,000 of his beſt Troops on that Side. There are not above 5000 Imperialiſts in Sicily, who have ſhut themſelves up in Meſſina and Syracuſa. They have abandoned Melazzo. The Spaniards have 18 Battalions, and 2000 Horſe, a prodigious Quantity of Ammunition, Equipage, and Proviſions, and (to crown all) a Million of Pieces of Eight. When this Fleet ſet Sail, a Blaſt of Wind blew the young Chevalier de St George's Hat off his Head into the Sea: Immediatly there were ſeveral officious enough to endeavour to take it up; but the young Chevalier called will go and get another in England." Whereupon the young King of Naples threw his Hat into the Sea, and said, " And I will go along with you: " But they may happen to go bareheaded a long time, if they get no Hats 'till they come amongſt you; for we are well aſſured, they will find none there that will fit their Heads.

CHARLESTOWN, Nov. 23.

We hear that on Saturday laſt the Petition of Coll. Purry was read and examin'd by the Hon. the Commons Houſe of Aſſembly, wherein he demanded, (1) that the 200 L. ſterl. due to him, for having carried over to South-Carolina even a greater number of People then he had engaged for, might be paid to him, 100 L. ſterl. now, and the other 100 in the Month of March next. (2) That the neceſſary Proviſions to the 260 Perſons he brought over with him laſt, the ſame as it was given to them that came before. (3) And laſtly that the Debts made at Georgia by the Paſſengers that landed there for Purrysburgh, for victuals and other neceſſaries, likewiſe for Periawgers to carry them to the ſaid Place, might be paid. Both the Hon. Houſes finding his demands very reaſonable, readily granted them.

To the Petition of the Miniſter at Purrysburg Mr. Chiffelle, it was anſwered that the Penſion of a Miniſter could not yet be allowed to him, till the Town of Purrysburg ſhould be erected into a Pariſh; in the mean while one hundred Pounds ſhould be paid to him for defraying the Charges of his Voyage, and further care be taken to ſatisfy him.
